optimize the selection information for said user” (emphasis added)

As understood by Applicants, Ismail relates to a system for recording television programs for subsequent viewing by a user that includes a preference determination module which is responsive to attribute information associated with television programs viewed by the user. The preference determination module categorizes the attribute information in accordance with categorization parameters to generate recordation preference information, indicative of television program viewing preferences of the user.

As understood by Applicants, Maissel relates to a subscriber unit for use in a television system including a television network and transmitting apparatus for transmitting program schedule information, the subscriber unit including a receiving unit for receiving the program schedule information.

As understood by Applicants, Sumita relates to an information-filtering unit that is connected with a user's video equipment by a communications line and a program content analyzing section that analyzes the contents of broadcast programs. A collation evaluation section evaluates the similarity between the analyses and a user's profile stored in a profile storage section. A program selecting selection transmits the result of program selection to the video equipment in the form of time information.

Applicants submit that Ismail, Maissel, and Sumita, taken either alone or in combination, do not teach or suggest the above-identified features of claim 1. Specifically, Applicants submit that there is no teaching or suggestion of a broadcasting system wherein said controlling unit computes said attribute information of the digital contents replayed by said user, analyzes said user's taste and based on the analysis, modifies a weight of each parameter of said selection information to optimize the selection information for said user, as recited in claim 1.

Applicants submit that nothing has been found in the art used as a basis for rejection of the dependent claims that would render claim 1 unpatentable.

Therefore, Applicants submit that independent claim 1 is patentable.

For reasons similar to, or somewhat similar to, those described above with regard to independent claim 1, independent claim 10 is also believed to be patentable.

Therefore, Applicants submit that independent claims 1 and 10 are patentable.

IV. DEPENDENT CLAIMS

The other claims are dependent from one of the independent claims, discussed above, and are therefore believed patentable for at least the same reasons. CONCLUSION

In the event the Examiner disagrees with any of statements appearing above with respect to the disclosure in the cited reference, or references, it is respectfully requested that the Examiner specifically indicate those portions of the reference, or references, providing the basis for a contrary view.
